Immigrants in Arizona

Arizona has a growing population of immigrants, making up more than 12 percent of the state’s residents. While one in six Arizona workers is an immigrant, state industries like agriculture depend on an even greater share of immigrants. As workers, business owners, taxpayers, and neighbors, immigrants are an integral part of Arizona’s diverse and thriving communities and make extensive contributions that benefit all.

More than one in eight Arizona residents is an immigrant, while nearly one in five is a native-born U.S. citizen with at least one immigrant parent.

- In 2015, 914,400 immigrants (foreign-born individuals) comprised 13.4 percent of the state’s population.¹
- Arizona was home to 452,530 women, 413,289 men, and 48,581 children who were immigrants.²
- The top countries of origin for immigrants were Mexico (56.1 percent of immigrants), Canada (4.2 percent), India (4.1 percent), the Philippines (2.9 percent), and Vietnam (2.7 percent).³
- In 2016, 1.2 million people in Arizona (18.4 percent of the state’s population) were native-born Americans who had at least one immigrant parent.⁴

Over 40 percent of all immigrants in Arizona are naturalized U.S. citizens.

- 380,187 immigrants had naturalized as of 2015,⁵ and 205,923 immigrants were eligible to become naturalized U.S. citizens in 2015.⁶
- More than two-thirds of immigrants (69.6 percent) reported speaking English “well” or “very well.”⁷

Immigrants in Arizona are distributed across the educational spectrum.

- One in five adult immigrants had a college degree or more education in 2015, while one in three had less than a high school diploma.⁸
