

Immigrants in Louisiana

Louisiana is home to a small but growing number of immigrants who make up 4 percent of the state's total population. While their share is small, immigrants are an essential part of the Louisiana labor force, accounting for 13 percent of residents working in farming, fishing, and forestry occupations. The majority of immigrants speak English well and are naturalized citizens or eligible for naturalization. As neighbors, business owners, taxpayers, and workers, immigrants are an integral part of Louisiana's diverse and thriving communities and make extensive contributions that benefit all.

Four percent of Louisiana residents are immigrants, while another 4 percent of residents are native-born U.S. citizens with at least one immigrant parent.

- In 2018, 195,027 immigrants (foreign-born individuals) comprised 4 percent of the population.¹
- Louisiana was home to 83,031 women, 93,628 men, and 18,368 children who were immigrants.²
- The top countries of origin for immigrants were Mexico (16 percent of immigrants), Honduras (15 percent), Vietnam (10 percent), the Philippines (5 percent), and Guatemala (4 percent).³
- In 2018, 199,405 people in Louisiana (4 percent of the state's population) were native-born Americans who had at least one immigrant parent.⁴

Two out of five immigrants in Louisiana are naturalized U.S. citizens.

- 77,832 immigrants (40 percent) had naturalized as of 2018,⁵ and 35,239 immigrants were eligible to become naturalized U.S. citizens in 2017.⁶
- Nearly three-fourths (73 percent) of immigrants reported speaking English "well" or "very well."⁷

Immigrants in Louisiana are distributed across the educational spectrum.

- More than one-fourth (28 percent) of adult immigrants had a college degree or more education in 2018, while one-fourth (26 percent) had less than a high school diploma.⁸
