Temporary Protected Status: An Overview

Temporary Protected Status (TPS) is a temporary immigration status provided to nationals of certain countries experiencing problems that make it difficult or unsafe for their nationals to be deported there. TPS has been a lifeline to hundreds of thousands of individuals already in the United States when problems in a home country make their departure or deportation untenable. This fact sheet provides an overview of how TPS designations are determined, what benefits TPS confers, and how TPS beneficiaries apply for and regularly renew their status.

What is Temporary Protected Status?

Congress created Temporary Protected Status (TPS) in the Immigration Act of 1990. It is a temporary immigration status provided to nationals of specifically designated countries that are confronting an ongoing armed conflict, environmental disaster, or extraordinary and temporary conditions. It provides a work permit and stay of deportation to foreign nationals from those countries who are in the United States at the time the U.S. government makes the designation.

For what reasons can a country be designated for TPS?

A country may be designated for TPS for one or more of the following reasons:

- An ongoing armed conflict, such as a civil war, that poses a serious threat to the personal safety of returning nationals;

- An environmental disaster, such as an earthquake, hurricane, or epidemic, that results in a substantial but temporary disruption of living conditions, and because of which the foreign state is temporarily unable to adequately handle the return of its nationals; or

- Extraordinary and temporary conditions in the foreign state that prevent its nationals from returning to the state in safety (unless the U.S. government finds that permitting these nationals to remain temporarily in the United States is contrary to the U.S. national interest).

Who has the authority to designate a country for TPS?

The Secretary of Homeland Security has discretion to decide when a country merits a TPS designation. The Secretary must consult with other government agencies prior to deciding to designate a country—or part of a country—for TPS. Although these other agencies are not specified in the statute, these consultations usually involve the Department of State, the National Security Council, and occasionally the Department of Justice.
In order to qualify for TPS, an individual must:

- be a national of the foreign country with a TPS designation (or if stateless, have last habitually resided in a country with a TPS designation);
- be continuously physically present in the United States since the effective date of designation;
- have continuously resided in the United States since a date specified by the Secretary of Homeland Security; and
- not be inadmissible to the United States or be barred from asylum for certain criminal or national security-related reasons, such as individuals who have been convicted of any felony or two or more misdemeanors.

Nationals of a designated country do not automatically receive TPS, but instead must register during a specific registration period and pay significant fees. In addition, an individual’s immigration status at the time of application for TPS has no effect on one’s eligibility, nor does the previous issuance of an order of removal.

What does TPS authorize a noncitizen to do?

An individual who is eligible for TPS must register by submitting an application to U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS), an agency of the Department of Homeland Security (DHS). If a person demonstrates eligibility and USCIS grants TPS, that person receives a temporary stay of deportation and temporary authorization to work in the United States. TPS beneficiaries are also eligible for advance parole, which provides permission to travel abroad and return to the United States, but they must apply for it separately. Beneficiaries are not eligible for any public assistance by virtue of their TPS status.
Which countries have TPS?

As of May 2019, the following 10 countries were designated for TPS and the designation had not expired:17

- El Salvador (Extended until January 2, 2020)18
- Haiti (Extended until January 2, 2020)19
- Honduras (Termination was scheduled to be effective January 5, 2020, but is on hold)20
- Nepal (Termination was scheduled to be effective June 24, 2019, but is on hold; employment authorization is auto-extended through March 24, 2020)21
- Nicaragua (Extended until January 2, 2020)22
- Somalia (Extended until March 17, 2020)23
- South Sudan (Extended until November 2, 2020)24
- Sudan (Extended until January 2, 2020)25
- Syria (Extended until September 30, 2019)26
- Yemen (Extended until March 3, 2020)27

*As of May 2019, these TPS designations had been terminated by DHS but will not go into effect until further notice, contingent upon rulings in at least two lawsuits, including: Bhattarai v. Nielsen (Honduras and Nepal) and Ramos v. Nielsen (El Salvador, Haiti, Nicaragua, and Sudan).

Which countries have had TPS in the past?

Since TPS was created, the following countries or parts of countries have had TPS designations that are now terminated:

- Angola (Expired March 29, 2003)28
- Bosnia-Herzegovina (Expired February 10, 2001)29
- Burundi (Expired May 2, 2009)30
- Guinea (Expired May 21, 2017)31
- Guinea-Bissau (Expired September 10, 2000)32
- Province of Kosovo (Expired December 8, 2000)33
• Kuwait (Expired March 27, 1992)\(^4\)

• Lebanon (Expired April 9, 1993)\(^5\)

• Liberia (Expired May 21, 2017)\(^6\)

• Montserrat (Expired August 27, 2004)\(^7\)

• Rwanda (Expired December 6, 1997)\(^8\)

• Sierra Leone (Expired May 21, 2017)\(^9\)

Does TPS create a path to permanent residence or citizenship?

TPS does not provide beneficiaries with a separate path to lawful permanent residence (a green card) or citizenship.\(^4\) However, a TPS recipient who otherwise is eligible for permanent residence may apply for that status.\(^1\)

Generally, a person who entered the United States without inspection is not eligible to apply for permanent residence. As of May 2019, three federal appellate circuits had ruled on this issue:

• Two federal appellate circuits (the Ninth and Sixth Circuits) ruled that a person with valid TPS status could adjust status to lawful permanent residence if otherwise eligible through a family-based or employment-based petition, even if he or she entered the United States without inspection.\(^4\)

• The Eleventh Circuit ruled that a TPS recipient who entered without inspection is not eligible to adjust to permanent residence.\(^5\)

DHS’ position, applicable in all other circuits, is that a TPS holder is not eligible to adjust status within the United States. In order to gain permanent resident status, a TPS recipient must instead depart the country to have a visa processed at a consular post. For many TPS holders who originally entered the United States without inspection, a departure to have a visa interview would trigger bars to re-entry for up to 10 years.

Alternatively, some TPS recipients may be eligible to adjust status if they were granted advance permission from USCIS (referred to as advance parole), traveled abroad and were paroled back into the United States.

What happens to a TPS beneficiary when a TPS designation ends?

TPS beneficiaries return to the immigration status that the person held prior to receiving TPS, unless that status has expired or the person has successfully acquired a new immigration status.\(^4\) TPS beneficiaries who entered the United States without inspection and who are not eligible for other immigration benefits, for example, would return to being undocumented at the end of a TPS designation and become subject to removal.
How are “Deferred Enforced Departure” and “Extended Voluntary Departure” related to TPS?

Deferred Enforced Departure (DED) is very similar to TPS but derives from the President’s foreign policy authority rather than from a specific law. As of May 2019, the only country designated for DED was Liberia, effective until March 30, 2020.

- There are no explicit criteria for making DED decisions or for determining who would be eligible for DED once a designation is determined.

- Just like TPS holders, DED beneficiaries receive a work permit and stay of deportation; however, they are not permitted to travel abroad.

Extended Voluntary Departure (EVD) was the predecessor to TPS prior to the Immigration Act of 1990. It was a discretionary authority used by the Attorney General (at a time when the Immigration and Naturalization Service was housed in DOJ) to give nationals of certain countries experiencing turbulent country conditions temporary permission to remain in the United States. Congress eliminated EVD with the creation of TPS.
Endnotes

3. Ibid.
4. Ibid.
5. 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b). Note that TPS designations based on an environmental disaster also require the foreign state to officially request designation. This request is not required for TPS designations for other reasons.
7. Ibid.
8. 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b). Occasionally, the Secretary will re-designate a country for TPS, which is different from an extension in that it updates the physical presence requirement to allow those foreign nationals who have arrived in the United States since the previous designation to apply for TPS.
9. Ibid.
10. 8 C.F.R. § 244.19.
11. Ibid.
12. 8 C.F.R. § 244.
13. Ibid. § 244.7.
15. 8 C.F.R. § 244.15.

40. 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(f).

41. Ibid. § 1254a.

42. Román v. Brown, No. 14-35633, ___ F.3d ___ (9th Cir. 2017); Flores v. USCIS, 718 F.3d 548 (6th Cir. 2013).

43. Serrano v. United States Attorney General, 655 F.3d 1260 (11th Cir. 2011).

44. 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(f).

47. Ibid., 38.2(i).