The Honorable Alejandro Mayorkas
Secretary
Department of Homeland Security
2707 Martin Luther King Jr Ave SE
Washington, DC 20528

Dear Secretary Mayorkas,

On Monday, the nation witnessed a tragedy as at least 53 individuals were found dead in a tractor-trailer in San Antonio, with reportedly 16 more individuals sent to local hospitals. As we mourn the dead and work to ensure that a tragedy like this does not occur again, we write to draw attention to the fate of the survivors, many of whom remain in the hospital today. We believe the surviving victims are at imminent risk of deportation or expulsion under Title 42 and want to ensure that your office is aware of this risk and takes action to prevent it from occurring.

The threat that surviving victims of this unspeakable tragedy could be traumatized again by a rapid deportation is not an idle one. In previous mass casualty incidents, victims and witnesses have ended up detained and deported within hours after being released from the hospital. For example, in August 2021, a survivor of a deadly car crash which killed 10 people in Encino, Texas, was deported just three days after the crash, while still wearing clothes streaked with blood.¹

In other circumstances, victims of deadly smuggling incidents are held as material witnesses long enough to take depositions and then detained and deported.² As a broader matter, we believe that it does not serve any principles of justice to force victims to testify, only to remove them once they have served that purpose. And in this case, doing so would cause enormous harm to the people who have already been through an unimaginable horror.

With Title 42 still in effect, we are concerned that local CBP or ICE officials may believe that the surviving victims of Monday’s tragedy may still be subject to expulsion or deportation, despite DHS’s existing victim protection memo. Expelling or deporting any survivor under those circumstances would simply compound the horrors that they had experienced in that overcrowded trailer.

That is why we are calling on the Department to ensure that survivors are paroled into the United States and provided with assistance in applying for a U or T visa or asylum, and exercise prosecutorial discretion to defer removal until those applications have been decided. With the perpetrators already arrested by ICE Homeland Security Investigations and likely to stand trial for their crimes, the victims will presumably be willing to provide information about what happened to them in a way which is likely to be helpful to the investigation or prosecution of the crime. Any Indigenous migrants should also be provided with Indigenous language interpretation services to assist with this process. But this cannot happen if they are rapidly expelled or deported.

Given the gravity of the situation, we hope that you will take swift action to prevent a miscarriage of justice. We look forward to hearing from your office soon.

Sincerely,
