

Immigrants in Delaware

Delaware has a sizable community of immigrants, many of whom hail from Mexico. Nine percent of Delawareans were born in another country, while another 9 percent of residents are native-born U.S. citizens with at least one immigrant parent. Delaware benefits from the various ways immigrants participate in the economy and labor force, with foreign-born residents accounting for a quarter of the state's workers in computer and math occupations and nearly a quarter of residents working in life, physical, and social science occupations. As neighbors, business owners, taxpayers, and workers, immigrants are an integral part of Delaware's diverse and thriving communities and make extensive contributions that benefit all.
